The facts are now confirmed. Such testimony is complete—the evidence conclusive.

It forms convincing proof of merit. "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills and have always found them a good remedy for kidney and bladder trouble," says Mrs. Francis S. Harlow, of Skillings avenue, South Paris, Me. "They certainly do strengthen the kidneys and relieve backache. I was feeling a little bad recently and knew that my kidneys needed a tonic. I used Doan's Kidney Pills and they gave me relief in a short time."

Later Testimony. "I am certainly grateful for what Doan's Kidney Pills have done for me," said Mrs. Harlow on May 1st, 1912. "I willingly confirm my former endorsement."

TEN WEEKS IN BED--EMINENT

PHYSICIANS FAILED--WONDERFUL RECOVERY.

I wish to inform you of the great benefit I have derived from the use of Swamp-Root. I had been a sufferer for more than twenty years from kidney and liver trouble and was almost constantly bed-ridden by the most eminent physicians treated by the most modern methods. I began the use of Swamp-Root. Inside of twenty-four hours I could see that I had been greatly benefited. I continued to use Swamp-Root until I had used several bottles when I really felt that my old trouble was completely cured and I am positive that any person suffering with kidney or liver trouble can be cured by the use of this preparation. I am now in the best of health, better than I have been for ten years or more. I do not know how to express myself as strongly as I desire, in favor of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, as I am sure that it saved my life and that my good health is due entirely to this great remedy. I heartily recommend it to every sufferer as I have been. It is a pleasure for me, gentlemen, to hand you this recommendation.

Lincoln-Day

On the eve of April sixteenth, at the home of the bride, in the presence of eighteen invited guests a pretty wedding was solemnized. The contracting parties were Edward L. Linscott of Bar Harbor and Laura Day of this place, officiating clergyman, Rev. Eugene Stover.

The bridal altar was of white with green trimmings. At the front of the altar was an arch of white. Suspended from this arch hung a white wedding bell all of which was festooned with ferns and snail.

In response to the strains of a wedding march played by Clair Hathaway the little flower girls, Helen Farrar, and Mildred Newell, appeared, each carrying a basket of white roses, ferns and sweet peas, following the flower girls were the bride and groom, from each basket a coil of white ribbon unwound, forming the bridal path which led to the altar.

The bride wore a dress of white crepe de chine, a full length bridal veil, caught back by swanston bows, and snail, a tiny gold neck chain with diamond pendant, a gift of the groom, and carried a bouquet of bridal roses.

At the request of the groom the full Episcopal order of service was carried out, also the double ring service, which taken together, constituted a ceremony of considerable length.

After the congratulations were offered, the bride and groom were seated, then the bridal pair left on the 9-13 train for a short trip to some part of New Hampshire and to Portland, Waterville and Bar Harbor.

The bride is the daughter of James Day of this place, is a graduate of the local high school, has musical talents and accomplishments and is loved by all who know her. The groom is principal and teacher of the school here, is well liked by the town's people and ranks high in the Masonic order. They will board at Mrs. Arthur Ricker's till the term-end of school, when they expect to go away, leaving many friends to wish them prosperity and happiness.

The wedding guests were: James Day, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bartlett, Mrs. Eugene Stover, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Estes, Mr. and Mrs. Rupert Hathaway, Mrs. Etta Tilton, Mrs. Flora Cole, Mrs. Lesmore Currier, Mrs. E. J. Thompson, Mrs. Clair Hathaway, Clara Jackson, Sybil Adams, James Billings, B. R. Billings, Lucian Vail.

TREED BY A BEAR.

A True Story.
Among the early settlers of the town of Norway situated in the northern part of Oxford county, was Asa Foster who moved into the wilderness of northern Maine, before the commencement of the present century. He had seven sons and several daughters, all of whom grew up to man and womanhood. Three of the sons settled in Norway, and if not all of them, are still living though advanced in years.

Although the town of Norway was settled comparatively early, it still borders on a great wilderness. On the north is the town of Grafton with but few scattering inhabitants; on the west and northwest, an unbroken forest, stretches away many miles into New Hampshire and on the east is a long wooded elevation known as the Puzzle mountain. Two rivers run through the town and empty into the Androscoggin. One is Sunday river, so called, because a surveying party spent a Sabbath on its banks, and the other takes the name of Bear river because the same party saw a bear either fording it, or very near it.

On these rivers are fertile belts of bottom land but the greater part of the town is broken and rough and a considerable portion is still covered with the original forests. In the wilderness wild animals, such as are usually found in the woods of Maine, are quite common though not so abundant as they were a few years ago. Among these, the common black bear, (Ursus Americanus) was quite plentiful, and in dry seasons, when the supply of food upon which these animals usually subsist was cut off, they frequently came down into the settlements and were very destructive to sheep and green corn. They would also rob orchards and bee hives and sometimes they have been known to attack and destroy young cattle. The bear story which we are about to relate is well authenticated, and the principal actor if we except the bear itself, is still living and was a member of the last Maine Legislature.

On the 10th day of September, 1846, Orrin Foster, son of Enoch, and grandson of Asa, of whom we have already spoken, was sent by his father to search for some cattle which had strayed into the woods, and were lost. He was then a young man about 16 or 17 years of age. His route took him up the side of Puzzle mountain, through pasture and woodland and when about two miles from home, he came across a cattle trail which led him to a place where he had got on track of the lost cattle, he pursued the trail and ere long he heard the tramp of some animal in the bushes near by, which he thought must be one of the cattle of which he was in pursuit. He kept on some 20 rods when he was surprised and alarmed at hearing three bounds and a fearful gnashing of teeth, and immediately a huge bear sprang from the thicket about three rods distant.

Young Foster stopped and clapped his hands and tried to encourage the dog by which he was accompanied to attack the monster. But the dog was very much frightened and slunk away and hid himself in the bushes. Foster turned and went about two rods to a sapling beech which was the only tree in the vicinity and which was about seven inches in diameter at the ground. The body of the tree was smooth and the lower limbs were about eight feet from the ground. The bear with jaws distended and eyes glowing like fire, was close upon him and his only chance was in being able to climb the tree. He sprang with all his strength and tried to grasp the lower limbs but failed, but he seized the trunk of the tree with both his hands and drew his feet up. The bear comprehending his intentions sprang after him but he was drawing himself into the lower branches. He came very near drawing Foster down, but with all his strength he broke away and ascended the tree with the bear in close pursuit. He went up nearly 30 feet from the ground where the tree was so small that he could easily clasp it in his hands, and the bear foaming with rage and disappointment, was about four feet below him.

The tree began to bend under the great weight and Foster tried to balance it, but the bear kept slowly advancing. In this moment of extreme peril, it occurred to Foster to try and shake his pursuer from the tree. Seizing his hold with a vice-like clasp, and with all his strength, quickened and increased by the fear of a horrible death, he shook the tree, and the bear being unable to sustain his weight on the under side fell to the ground. His fall of 25 feet nearly stunned him, but he soon sprang up and made several unsuccessful efforts to reclimb the tree, but each time fell back. While Bruin was trying to climb up a second time, Foster was not idle.

Taking out his jackknife, he descended the tree a short distance, and cut off a large limb about five feet long which he whittled to a point at one end, intending to make an attempt at the bear's eyes, should he succeed in reclimbing the tree. Being foiled in his attempts at climbing he watched Foster's motions for a few moments and then went for the dog. But the dog was not pleased with Bruin's situation and kept himself at a safe distance from his bearship and finally left for home.

The bear then returned to the foot of the tree and vented his anger in discharges of howls and in gnashing his teeth. He would then follow the cattle path for 20 rods or more and then return to the tree; thinking probably that Foster had availed himself of his absence and had descended from the tree. He tried this ruse again and again, but at last he became discouraged at the prospect of an evening meal in this direction, and about sunset with a howl that seemed to shake the mountain and reverberate through its dark ravines and caverns, he slowly retired.

When Foster rushed against the beech, he bruised his stomach and after the passage, his chest began to pain him severely, and he found it was badly swollen. He was without coat and exposed on the north side of the mountain, to the chilly blasts of an autumn night. He had begun to suffer from hunger and thirst, having neither ate nor drank since morning.

His hands and feet were badly swollen by holding on to the tree and the blood rushed to his head and throat, so as to almost produce delirium. He had called for assistance until his voice had failed him, and, after the bear left him, he did not dare to leave the tree, fearing the fearful monster might still be lurking near, ready to pounce upon him. This occurred on Sunday and his parents had attended religious services at some distance from home and had stopped with a friend to take tea. Returning at night, they found the dog had returned without his master, and, from his uneasiness they felt certain that Orrin had met with some accident and was detained on the mountain.

The news quickly spread through the neighborhood and some twenty persons assembled with lanterns and tin trumpets, and with lighted torches. Dividing into small squads, they ascended the mountain, blowing their trumpets and building bonfires, to much of which young Foster from his elevated perch in the tree top, was a silent spectator. But he was so debilitated that he could neither go down from the tree nor make himself heard.

It was eleven o'clock when three persons approached the tree and among them he recognized the voice of his father. The hour of deliverance had come and he was seen in the midst of his friends. After having his limbs chafed for a while, he was able, with the assistance which he received, to descend the mountain and reach his home, but it was more than a year before he was able to perform much labor. To him, his deliverance was like a renewal of life.

While the hungry bear was exerting all his strength to reach him, he expected to be torn in pieces, and when the monster left him, death still seemed to hover near him in the fearful forms of cold, hunger and exhaustion. This was nearly thirty years ago and Mr. Foster has since reared up a family, filled important offices of his town and served three terms in the State Legislature. He still preserves the stick which he cut from the friendly beech tree, and will never forget the terrible incidents of that memorable day and night, when he was treed by a bear.—[Oxford County Citizen.]

THE HOME MERCHANT.

The home merchant. Who is he? He is the chap who gives you credit when you are financially broke, and carries your account until you are able to pay.

He is the chap who gives you back your money or makes exchanges when you are not satisfied with what you have bought.

He is the chap who meets you at the door with a handshake, and lets you out with a message to the "kids", and a real come-again good-by.

He is the chap who meets and greets you on the street every day in the year, and takes a neighborly interest in your family and your affairs.

He is the chap whose clerks and book-keepers and other employees live in Norway and spend their money with you and with other Norway people.

He is the chap who pays heavy taxes to help support Norway schools, and build Norway streets, and maintain the Norway fire department, and lighting and water service.

He is the chap who helps support Norway churches and charity organizations, and Norway lodges and clubs and talks for Norway and boosts for Norway every day in the year.

He is the chap who visits you when you are sick, sends flowers to your family when you die, and follows your body out among the trees and tombstones as far as human feet may travel with the dead.

He is the home merchant—your neighbor—your friend—your helper in times of need.

Don't you know that every dollar that spends out of Norway for merchandise, is sent to strangers—to men who would not trust you for a box of matches, to men who would turn you over to the police if you should enter their offices?

You don't save much, frequently nothing, when you send your money out of Norway and take all the risk yourself of getting damaged or inferior goods. And don't you know that the growth and prosperity of Norway depends very largely upon the success and prosperity of the home merchants? Out-of-town people judge our town by the appearance of our stores and the degree of enterprise shown by our merchants. And our home merchants cannot succeed unless home folks give them loyal support.

Automobiles are said to be selling well this season in spite of the business depression, and it is a curious fact that Vermont stands first among the New England states on per capita basis of automobiles, having one for every forty-eight persons. Rhode Island has one for every forty-nine, Massachusetts, one for every fifty-one, Maine, one for every fifty-six, and New Hampshire, one for every fifty-seven persons.

Don't Neglect Your Stomach.

If It's Upset Mi-o-na Puts It Right and Ends Distress or Nothing to Pay

If you are one of the thousands who cannot eat a simple meal without its lying in the stomach like lead, fermenting and causing painful distress, sourness and gas, do not delay but go at once to your druggist and get some Mi-o-na, a simple prescription especially prepared to quickly and effectively end indigestion or dyspepsia and correct bad stomachs.

You must not allow your upset stomach to go from bad to worse for there will surely be longer periods of food fermentation causing greater agony, more gas, sick headache, unrefreshing sleep, "blue spells" and nervousness.

If your stomach is out of order, feels badly after meals, you must put it right. A few Mi-o-na tablets are just what you need—always keep them handy—they are small, pleasant to take, and absolutely harmless. Use Mi-o-na freely at the first sign of distress. It not only quickly ends the misery but helps to unclasp the liver, cleanse and strengthen the stomach so it can digest your food in the natural way, then you are well, hale and hearty.

Mi-o-na is not only one of the most effective remedies but inexpensive. Noyes Drug Store sells it with agreement to refund the money if it does not give satisfaction. 17419

Putting Tobacco in Tins is Like Locking the Stable Door
—"After the Horse is Gone"

Real tobacco flavor depends upon the leaf being preserved in its natural state, possible only by pressing the leaf into plug form and keeping it in by covering it with a natural leaf wrapper. The natural flavor and richness of tobacco escape when cut or granulated.

Take a Plug of Sickle that is even thoroughly dried out when you whittle it off it crumbles into dust, but it burns and smoke smooth and cool as it has all of its original tobacco flavor preserved, unevaporated in Plug Form. Whittling a pipeful is little trouble, amply repaid both quality and quantity. Try this experiment and see for yourself.

BEHIND THE SCREENS

While you are enjoying the thrills of the movies, have you ever wondered what goes on in the little iron booth, where the picture machine is located? Sometimes there is an interval when no pictures are shown and you have time to eat candy or peanuts and talk over the events of the week with your neighbors; but there is no wait for the man behind the cameragraph. Round and round must go the reels, unwinding from one to another, and the arm which turns the crank must be even and steady, or the pictures will jump or flicker.

As is well known, the powerful machine is placed in the center of the gallery, in a fire proof box, it being large enough to hold the cameragraph and give room for the necessary work incident to rewinding the reels and making other necessary changes. In one corner is a telephone, connecting with the box office, which can be used by the operator while keeping the machine in motion. There is a narrow slit in the little room, through which he can keep an eye on the pictures, and another opening through which the powerful light is thrown upon the screen. There is a ventilating device, connected with the chimney, which not only gives air, but in case of fire, carries the smoke up through the chimney.

The films are received wound on a reel, which is placed in a boxlike place in the front of the machine, from which the films are threaded to another large spool, so that the electric light shines directly through, in a square about as big as a postage stamp. The films are about an inch and a half in width and one thousand feet in length. When properly run, it takes about fifteen minutes to put one through the machine.

The first thing the operator does when the picture is to place the reel in proper position and thread it through various grooves, in and out of the little box, and fasten the end on the reel below, on which it is wound. There is a long plain piece of celluloid which is on the end, much like a film in a snap shot camera. The reels and manner of winding reminds a typist of a ribbon on the Underwood machine. The back of the machine, which contains a most powerful electric light, with two carbons, is pushed aside while this is being done and when all is ready, is moved back, the electric light turned on and adjusted so that the spot light shines directly through the film and hits the curtain in exactly the right place. Then begins the steady revolution of the wheel, not too fast, or too slow, but just right, one hand being free to turn the light on or off, as is needed.

The reporter entered the booth just before the comedy reels came on. At first it was all so strange, with the buzzing of the machine and the bright light projecting on the screen, that only frequent glimpses of the pictures could be seen, but after becoming more familiar with the surroundings, it was possible to cast one eye through the opening in the boxlike room, and with the other watch the skilful manner in which the operator kept up the steady motion of winding the film from one reel to another. He adjusted the light, took down the receiver to answer a telephone call, or made other necessary changes, at the same time keeping his eyes, now on the screen, now on the machine. The pictures are put in the cameragraph in a reverse position from that which they appear on the screen, or upside down, which is also true of the advertising slides and other announcements. After a film is run, it must be rewound by an assistant, to run the next time.

While it is important to have a machine on which you can rely, it is equally important to have an operator who knows his business, is quick, alert, and in every way capable of overcoming difficulties at a moment's notice.

"What do you do when a film snaps?" the reporter asked.

"Stick it together with cement," was the quick answer. "Sometimes we get a film which has been broken and we get together together improperly, and then it snaps when we run it. Some people think an operator regulates the time that various incidents, or a letter, in a picture are shown," he continued. "Of course these things are in the film and cannot be shown longer than is arranged. One has to gauge the proper time of the whole film and keep to that motion throughout. People sometimes wonder at the quick jump from one incident to another. That is when a part of the film has been cut out for mending or other reason."

We spoke of the possibility of fire. There is an automatic arrangement which brings a little slide down over the film in case of fire and also closes the slits in front, so the fire can be confined to the sheet iron box. A flu connects with the chimney, also. The chief and practically all danger is from panic, as the hall can be cleared in three minutes under ordinary circumstances.

UP TO THE WOMEN.

The life of modern trade for the most part depends upon the direction in which the woman exercises her mind. She can make a man an industry, direct prosperity into certain channels or scatter her largess abroad where it is of little direct value to herself. Therefore this matter of building up the trade of New England needs first of all the support of the women of New England for upon them alone rests the chances of success of the movement. The manufacturers, the merchants, the newspapers and the salesmen of New England ask the women of New England to help them out.

The finest goods in the world are made in New England and the more of them that are made the cheaper they can be sold. If the women of these states will ask for New England goods when they go to market, if they will insist upon having them in preference to things that are made elsewhere it will soon put new energy into the making and selling of goods here.

Some of our products are world famous and some are just beginning to take their right place in the standard of trade. If the things that they know are made here, if they will see that the merchant is ready to understand their preference there will be the mighty little difficulty in selling the products that make up the bulk of the New England industry.

A boy once had a dog. He sent to market and got the dog a nickel's worth of bones; they were nice looking bones, so nice that grandma decided they were too good for a dog and made soup of them and put the meat into hash for breakfast. Whereat the boy got another set of bones for his dog, and cautioned the butcher about sending such good ones, and they were so lean the dog couldn't gnaw them. Whereupon a great truth came into the boy's heart, and he said to his mother: "It's hard to be a dog, isn't it mother?"

GILEAD.

Aubin-Edgerly
Fred Aubin and Flora Blanche Edgerly were united in marriage at the Methodist parsonage by Rev. T. Chapman of Bethel, April 15. Mrs. Aubin taught successfully in the public schools of Maine and New Hampshire until her mother's death four years ago, since then she has faithfully kept house for her father.

Mr. Aubin is a mill-man. There have been the best wishes of many friends and a newly furnished home waiting their return.

Thomas Morel and family have moved to Gorham, N. H.

Mrs. Orman Bennett was in Portland a few days last week.

F. B. Coffin has been in Portland for a few days.

Goldie Adams of Stoneham is boarding at John E. Richardson's.

Doris Foster of Norway has been visiting her brother, Cyril Foster, for a few days.

C. C. Newell and family have moved to their new home in Berwick. Mr. Newell going by team Monday and Mrs. Newell and children by car Tuesday.

W. D. Morse has bought the Connor farm, the last farm in Shelburne on the south side of the Androscoggin river before the Gilead line is reached.

LOOK FOR A BRIGHT SIDE

A good many people are sick and what good does it do? Now it is an absolute fact that the more sickness is talked about the more of it there is. Something like the old farmer saying, "The more corn is grown the more hogs are raised; the more hogs are raised the more corn is grown."

So let's quit talking about it. Let's stop and think of the thousands who are who are strong and hearty and well.

Some people are out of work. The mills are shut down in many places and thousands of people are talking about it. Now what good does that do? The fact remains that the more we talk about it the more hard times there will be.

So let's quit talking about it. Let's stop and think of the thousands who have enough to eat and ought to be thoroughly happy. Happiness is contagious and maybe we will catch it.

Any hard times don't make us any more work; talking hard times don't help the grocer, and the butcher and the clothier and the boot and shoe man.

Just how much of this hard times is due to political scheming and how much to Democratic tariff and how much to the European war, we don't know. It is peculiar that in Canada where so many are shut down and people are out of work and there is talk of hard times there is no Democratic tariff, and there is no change in administration, but there is the effects of the war.

FLEETING FAME.

"But who is Artemus Ward? One sees him quoted occasionally in the English press, but something tells me that he was—or may be—an American." Thus a writer in the esteemed Springfield Republican, and apparently, as far as the context shows, in all seriousness.

So much for the fleeting fame of the greatest American fun maker of his generation, who died, still a young man, in England 43 years ago last month.

There was nothing English about him except his popularity as a lecturer there, and his death there from consumption.

He sleeps under a modest, moss-covered stone in the little cemetery of his native town of Waterford, Maine—he spoke of it as "Waterford, not far from Rumford."

And on the stone is his real name that now means far less to the world than that under which his droll and whimsical humor won his uncharitable applause of his contemporaries—Charles Farrar Browne.

It is of interest to note the leading fore Artemus Ward was also a Maine native, though his name is even less heard today—Seba Smith, a native of Buckfield, whose wit and satire made him a national figure in the politics of his day.

And Maine likewise gave the world the leading American humorist in the generation that followed Artemus Ward—Bill Nye, a native of Shirley, near Moosehead Lake. All of them died far from their native state, and the world which forgets its fret and care in laughing at them and with them forgets them almost as quickly as its laughter dies away.

PUT A BET ON HIM

Don't poke fun at the boy who comes in from the forks of the creek, with seed in his hair and mud on his face, pants, and just one gallus on. He may be president of some bank, pastor of some church, judge of some court or physician to some people.

Just because a boy lives in town, wears two kinds of socks, parts his hair in the middle, sucks a cigarette, curls his hair on his mother's curling tongs and has a daddy with spondulix to burn—that is no sign that he is going to run this country in the future. We'll put our money on the sound, sane and sensible boy from the forks of the creek.

Cheap Paint.

The cheapest paint is the one that goes farthest and wears best; there is most in a gallon of it.

What is a quart of milk worth? Depends on the milk of milk worth? Depends on the milk of milk worth?

So of paint; depends on the paint. Devote is worth the top price, whatever it is. Poor paint is worth nothing at all; you've got to pay your painter $3.50 for putting it on; and it isn't worth it.

Devote goes twice as far and wears twice or three times as long and wears longer.

The cheap paint is Devote at the top of the market.

It was quite a while coming, but was received nice and fresh. It was raised on Mr. Tubbs' land, being cleared and planted since he went there last October. They have a lot of things planted and have a number of trees of different kinds set out. They also sent a handful of peas in the pod large enough to eat that they had raised. It was reported that they were all coming back. It must be a mistake for they all like too well for that.

The Light Six As It Will Be

7-Passenger Phaeton
3-Passenger Roadster

Think What Security One Gets in a HUDSON

The HUDSON is built by one of the strongest concerns in the industry.

It is built by the largest builder of class cars—cars that cost over $1250.

It is designed by Howard E. Coffin, whose designs have for years led the trend in America.

It shows the Light Six in perfection. Scores of engineers worked for years to get every detail right.

And 12,000 owners in 43 countries have proved this Light Six' faultless. In the past two seasons they have driven it at least 30 million miles.

Our Prize Success

There have been many successful HUDSONS, but none so successful as this. When this Light Six came out—the first model—it took a year to catch up with our orders.

Sales last year—$11,500,000—nearly doubled the year before. This year shows another amazing increase.

And never was a car so widely copied as this HUDSON—the pioneer Light Six.

Look a Year Ahead

When you buy a Light Six look a year ahead. Do more than consider how rival cars perform now. There are many years coming for the car you buy.

You want a Light Six when you buy a class car. You want lightness, economy, low upkeep cost. Crude, heavy cars are not popular now.

Get the Light Six that has proved itself right. The HUDSON has done that for two seasons, in more than 12,000 hands.

Luxury's High Mark

This HUDSON sets a new high mark, in beauty, finish, comfort and equipment. We have given a whole year to refinements since the model itself was perfected. You will be proud to own it.

Last spring there was a shortage of HUDSONS. Buyers waited weeks for cars. Now we have larger output, but there will be far from enough, we think. With such a popular car it is wise to choose early. We urge you to come this week.

THE THINGS THEY AFFORD.

Did you ever stop to think what an amount of character-reading we may do, simply by noticing the things people say they can't afford—and comparing them with the things they do afford? Not long ago I mentioned a certain $1 magazine favorably to a neighbor, and suggested that she subscribe for it.

"Oh, no!" she cried, "we really can't afford it!" And yet, this family could afford to buy cheap jewelry for the children, to attend the shows that come to town, to fill their house with cheap pictures and showy furniture, but for reading matter they could not spare money except for the daily paper, the local weeklies, one or two agricultural papers, and a few low-grade story-papers.

To deck themselves and their house with showy imitations of expensive things, to attend entertainments which they forgot two days later, they are sacrificing the beneficial influence of good reading.

"We can't afford to buy a new coat," said a well-to-do city man to me one day.

A little later, it developed that he had his feet treated by a chiropodist, and that his wife had her hair shampooed and was massaged by the same woman—but they couldn't afford meat!

"I can't afford a typewriter," said a woman whose business brings her a great many letters to answer; she couldn't afford a $25 typewriter, but she could afford to toil slowly with the pen, year after year, when she had money enough in the bank to buy the machine, and never know it.

I have known of families who could not afford to pay their bills. They would run up big accounts where they could, and spend their cash for luxuries, or to make a show. I have known of people with handsome homes and motor-cars, who were notoriously the "slowest pay" in the grocer's list of patrons.

There are folks who can't afford to pay the minister anything, but who go to the moving picture show every week, and often two or three times a week, if they get the chance. There are men who grow about how wasteful women are, and how they can't afford to buy them neat, up-to-date clothing, who burn up in tobacco more money every year than would buy these things, and whose administration of their part of the family income is far from judicious.

There are folks who can afford an auto that can't afford to shingle their buildings; folks who can afford stylish outside garments, but can't buy comfortable underwear; folks who buy lace curtains for the parlor, and bake with a scrap-iron stove.

There are men who can't afford a hired girl who do afford a wife-funeral which the girl might have postponed; women who scrimp the table to get a silk gown, and achieve dyspepsia for the family; folks to lump them all together who can afford money for display, and can't make a solid foundation for the superstructure to rest upon.

What do we afford—and what can't we afford? It seems to me that none of us can afford to pretend to be richer than we are; to scrimp on essentials to buy non-essentials; to cater exclusively to the body, and forget to provide for the mind; to become so engrossed with our worldly expenditures that we can afford nothing for the God who gave us all we have.—Maine Farmer.

DETERMINE TO DO SOMETHING

Do you want to see better times? Then do your share. If every man and woman in this Country would start out tomorrow, determined to start something, hard times would disappear in a week or two. Suppose all of us started out, right now. Suppose we decided to buy the things we have been doing without and pay cash for them? Suppose we looked around, picked out the things that needed repair, called in the workmen, set them at their tasks and paid them their wages on the spot? Remember, not only you would be doing this, but the other fellow as well. He would be buying from you or hiring you—the money you spend would come back to you somehow. It always does. That's what makes good times. We do not claim to know all about economics, but we feel sure that if we all put our shoulders to the wheel the so-called hard times will become pretty soft. It's worth trying.

THE GEMS OF THE STATE OF MAINE.

Prof. George R. Howe of Norway is lecturing on Maine Minerals and Gems in different parts of the state. An exchange in the eastern part of the state says: Many of the precious stones mentioned were now in those present and few realized that the resources of this state in these products, are as great as Prof. Howe showed them to be.

The speaker told first of the contributions of the atmosphere, the winds, the forests, the soils in making material for minerals. He explained how the production of the minerals is going forward now as it always has and that the minerals are decaying just as fast as ever. It was here that Prof. Howe succeeded in interesting his audience in the preservation of minerals so precious and still so much over-looked.

Prof. Howe gave a tabulation of the total values of the minerals in the United States, showing the relative value of each mineral in all the states and then comparing this tabulation with that of the state of Maine. It was shown that there are very few minerals that have not already been found in this state and the speaker stated that there are many other minerals not yet promoted in this state, which, when developed, will be of great commercial value.

Under the subject of building stones the speaker described the granite, sand, peat and a number of others. He told how these are procured, their value and the numerous uses that most of them can be put to. It was indeed surprising for those not well versed in this to learn the different phases of the work in securing the material for building purposes and Prof. Howe had the closest attention of all during his talk on this subject.

He also spoke of the metals and ores in this state going into detail in various instances and showing the most interesting phases in securing a thorough knowledge of these. He explained generally and then specifically everything under this head and told of the commercial value of both the rare as well as the more common varieties of metals.

The speaker dwelt for some time on metallic and non-metallic elements of Maine and their uses.

The part of the lecture dealing with precious stones was extremely interesting. Prof. Howe presented a good deal of time in explaining the various stones, and the different phases of the work in securing the material for building purposes and Prof. Howe had the closest attention of all during his talk on this subject.

Prof. Howe attaches especial importance to the peat industry and expresses the belief that there is a billion dollars worth of peat in the state now that if properly stored was given it the production for commercial purposes would become a great industry in the state.

The speaker said that if more attention was given to mining in this state there would be a great amount of money made from this occupation.

At the close of the lecture the audience had the privilege of inspecting Prof. Howe's fine collection of metals and gems.

OXFORD.

A Picturesque and Prosperous Town, Amid the Oxford Hills.

Situated on the Grand Trunk Railway about forty miles from Portland, at the foot of beautiful Lake Thompson, the little town of Oxford has many natural resources and possibilities for development.

The business center of town proper is located 1 1/2 miles to the west of the Grand Trunk station and contains several thriving industries the most important being the woolen mill of the Robinson Manufacturing Co., which gives steady employment to over 100 hands and many times it has been necessary to run a night crew to enable the firm to keep up with its orders. Other industries are the basket factory of J. L. Holden, shingle, grist and planing mills.

Oxford contains several stores, being the trading center for a considerable area. As an agricultural town there are probably but few if any in Western Maine, which contain more or better farming land. Allen's hill in the west and Thomas hill in the east, with the fine valley of the Little Androscoggin between, give Oxford a much larger agricultural area than the towns to the north and east which are more broken by mountains. At the geographical center of the town is Oxford station and the sweet corn canner of Fernald, Keene & True Co., and this together with the good roads radiating out to all sections of the town give the farmers superior marketing and shipping advantages.

The population of Oxford by the last census was 1221 and the valuation about $500,000. Besides the main town there is the little village of Welchville almost adjoining and another little hamlet at Oxford station. As a summer resort Oxford is growing in popularity. Situated on the shores of Lake Thompson with the beautiful hills and mountains of "Old Oxford" in the background, and good roads extending in all directions around the lake shore and through the woodlands here to attract the summer guest. Oxford Spring House is one of the largest hotels in the county and does a thriving business through the summer season. Camp Oxford, a large summer school for boys, is located in the limits of the town and the cottages dot the shores of Lake Thompson, Hogan, Whitney and Marshall ponds.

Oxford, in common with other Maine towns is gradually awakening to its possibilities. The town has good schools and churches, supports an excellent high school and in the building and maintenance of good highways stands in the very front ranks. The town is lighted by electricity from the Mechanic Falls plant. Only recently a fine library building was erected near the center of town which cost approximately $3,500 and was made possible through the public spiritedness of the citizens, the entire amount being raised by subscription. A new high school building is being agitated and other improvements are contemplated.

Altogether Oxford is a town rich in natural resources and all that is needed is an organization of its public spirited citizens into a board of trade or town improvement society, to pull together for the town and advertising its possibilities. With such an organization to work for the town's interest there is no reason why Oxford should not become one of the most thriving towns in Western Maine.

VERDICT SET ASIDE

James Crosby Adm. vs. Maine Central

The verdict for $1200 damages in the Crosby case vs. the Maine Central Railway has been set aside and the Law Court decides in favor of the Maine Central.

The accident, by which the intestate, whom we shall hereafter designate as the plaintiff for the sake of convenience, lost his life, occurred on the afternoon of Saturday, March 9, 1912, at the Lincoln Avenue grade crossing in the town of Rumford.

The boy was 11 years of age. A certain amount of heedlessness is to be expected in a boy of his age and may be consistent with due care on his part, but nothing but a gross negligence existed here. He was "fooling" in the play with his companion up to the very instant of the collision. Entirely oblivious to all danger, thoughtlessly, rashly and negligently he went to his death. Such conduct must be condemned as grossly negligent even in a boy twelve years of age.

In this case, the plaintiff evidently placed no reliance upon the driver or his watchfulness, and he had no occasion to do so. All three, sitting on the same seat, were apparently playfellows together, much as they would have been had they been walking on the street instead of being in the car. The fact that the plaintiff no less careless in this case, the crossing the vision was obstructed by the higher banks, the trees and a woodyard, changing the situation.

The more dangerous the crossing, the greater the care demanded of the traveler. At a point fifty feet from the track for a long distance. Had the approaching train, but it is admitted that he did not. The difficulty of seeing and hearing the train is therefore immaterial as to the absence of even the slightest effort on the plaintiff's part, reasonable effort, which convicts him of contributory negligence.

The accident was deplorable, but unless we are prepared to hold that in years is injured by the negligence of another he is entitled to recover, we cannot sustain this verdict.

Motion sustained. Verdict set aside.

NEEDLEWORK HINT

When lace is added to a round dolly this suggestion may be a help—Measure the exact quantity of lace needed, double the lace and roll it into a cord, tightly with the cord to half the width of the lace. Dip cord end in water to remove the cord and unravel. The lace will be circular and may easily be sewed to the dolly.

When wetting many women are bothered with the spool of thread falling from the lap to the floor. A small pocket in the apron with an eyelet hole for the thread to run through keeps the spool in place and saves much time and annoyance.

Seriously Injured
 Herbert Hall is rapidly recovering from his injuries, received when his new team of horses ran away at the Falls last week. The extent of John Welch's injuries cannot be determined yet, though one lung is punctured and all or part of the ribs torn off. He cannot move his body but is resting as comfortable as could be expected with good prospects of recovery.

Hall drives the Mt. Zion Spring Water company's heavy team. On Thursday morning he had two green horses, only purchased the previous day, hitched to the wagon. During the loading of empty bottles at the freight station, John Welch came along and looked the new horses over. Hall had hold of the bridle of one horse. Welch suggested that Hall put blankets on the horses as they seemed to be quite warm. Hall asked Welch to hold the near one while he got the blankets. This Welch did and as Hall was putting a blanket on the near horse, the animals became frightened and started to run. Hall caught hold of the bridle of the near horse that Welch had hold of, but the united strength of the two men could not hold the horses in check. They dragged the men quite a distance. When the men let go, both fell under the horses, face down. Hall was not hit by the horses but is it not known whether Welch was hit by them.

The wagon wheels passed over Hall's legs and over Welch's back.

Hall escaped with bruised legs and out face. Welch was less fortunate, having several ribs broken, his face battered and serious injuries to the internal organs.

Hall was taken to his home and Welch to McCarty's hospital, where he now lies in a critical condition.

THE SCIENCE OF DIET

People of a nervous disposition need a nourishing, nerve-building diet. Eggs served in various ways, milk, cereals, etc., should form a standard part of the diet. Be careful of a lavish use of tomatoes, red meats. Supply your table with quantities of fruit and fresh vegetables, and serve bread or biscuits frequently. Should you have a tendency to obesity be careful to avoid an excess of starch and sweets. Consult your physician about any especial tendency that you know your family or any member of it to possess, and be guided by his advice, eliminate such foods as might be harmful. In families where there is no special predisposition or hereditary tendency to be considered, let common sense guide you, read up on dietetics and combinations and indigestible foods.

You will find the study an interesting one, but beware of fads. A diet must be varied to be wholesome, and it is better to use spices and condiment in moderation than to let your table lack flavor from overzeal in leaving out everything that is not pre-eminent wholesome.

 ner, the greater part of his life has mends for his services for many so-

SHE COULD NOT EAT

Substantial Foods Until She Took Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Sunapee, N. H., Feb. 15, 1915.—A resident of this town, Mrs. S. J. Thurbur, makes this statement as to the great medicinal merit of Hood's Sarsaparilla: "I believe it my duty to state that some years ago I took Hood's Sarsaparilla for ulcers of the stomach, from which I had suffered for a long time, and derived great benefit. When afflicted I had to live on milk and water and even these things distressed me greatly, but after taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I could eat what I chose without distress. "I cannot say too much in favor of Hood's Sarsaparilla. I certainly am as fond of it as in years gone by. If I miss taking it during a spring, I always go to it before the summer is over. I have not had one of those horrid ulcers of the stomach since I first took it, 25 years ago. My whole family take it every year." Hood's Sarsaparilla contains, besides sarsaparilla, the great cathartic, stillingia and blue flag; those great anti-bilious and liver remedies, mandrake and dandelion; those great kidney remedies, ura, ura, juniper berries and pipsissewa; those great stomachic tonics, gentian root and wild cherry bark; other good remedies, but not physicians prescribe.

100 Years Old

"Aunt Sally" Pillsbury, after reaching almost 101 years of age, was laid to rest in her grave in this village Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. Pillsbury would have been 101 had she lived until next June. The funeral this afternoon was attended by many of the residents of both Kezar Falls and Parsonsfield, for she had long been a prominent resident of this section of the State, one to whom the other inhabitants referred with pride. Mrs. Pillsbury was born here during the closing days of the War of 1812. She passed the greater part of her life in this section, though part of her time in later years was passed with her children in Boston. During the past few years of her life, she lived with her son, John, of Kezar Falls. Her daughter, Miss Abbie Pillsbury, also lived with her. Her other two children, Jacob and Oliver, made their homes in Boston. Even up to her death, Mrs. Pillsbury possessed all her faculties. Her memory was remarkable and she was continually the center of many neighborhood groups when she would tell of the early days of the settlement, recall when residents went to the wars and of the early settlers who had long since passed away. Summer visitors to the section never failed to call on her when they could and they were always well repaid for their visits.
